CIRCLING the CIRCLE

—Sales of incandescent lamps in the United States in 1927 totaled approximately 320,000,000 large size and 218,000,000 small. This is an increase of about 8,000,000 in the large and 16,000,000 in the small over 1926.

—Welcome news to middle western farmers comes from the Weather Bureau. The Mississippi will not go into another rampaging flood this year. At least, not if present signs are to be taken seriously.

—Testing between 900,000 and a million cattle a month, the work of co-operative tuberculosis eradication is beginning to show appreciable results. The government now has nearly 19,300,000 cattle under supervision, with about 4,100,000 waiting for inspection.

—A new government educational film to be released by the Department of Agriculture is "The Barnyard Underworld." It deals with lack of sanitation in the barnyard and the diseases that are direct results of germs, worms and other germin that breed in such unsanitary places.

—Six years of government experimenting on the immunization of suckling pigs has met with success. The Bureau of animal industry announces that its experiments, conducted in various government farms protect pigs one day old from the ravages of cholera.

—A dealer in Toronto, Canada, traded a new piano, valued at $350 for two old stamps, and is satisfied that he has the better of the bargain. He turned the piano over to J. H. Burns, of Niagara-on-the-Lake for a six-penny yellow stamp of the Colony of New Brunswick and a one-cent green stamp of the Colony of Nova Scotia.

—If Frank Vizzo, of New York City, had not fallen in love with one of his victims he might still be a successful robber. One night Frank held up Rose Roberts. He liked her and asked permission to call. Rose agreed. The next night Frank appeared at the appointed place but instead of Rose he found several policemen waiting to haul him to jail.

—With 104 fiancés, Kleberta Bellett, of Bouloque-sur-Mer, France, was afraid of mixing their names, so she kept a little book to identify them and keep track of meetings. Each of the 104 contributed gifts and many large sums of money. Several went to police and demanded an accounting, so Kleberta's little book has become police evidence.

—Let the sows and litters take care of themselves. Sows and litters self-fed, says the Department of Agriculture, are better than those hand fed. The results of three years of testing on government farms show that: Self-feeding sows and litters during the suckling period saved both labor and feed; the self-fed lot was more thrifty than the hand-fed lot a total of 441 pounds of feed was required for 100 pounds of gain in the self-fed lot, while the hand-fed lots required 603 pounds.

—Says the Urbana Democrat about the Bachelor's Club:

A correspondent to Billy Ireland's "Passing Show" page in the Sunday Columbus Dispatch is putting a hard one up to Editor "Norm" Ralston of the Circleville Herald. The correspondent writes: "There appeared recently in the Circleville Herald a list of names of all the old bachelors in the city. I'll bet a dollar to a bushel of knot holes that the editor wouldn't print the names of all the old maids in the city." We're stringing our bets that way too.—Urbana Democrat.

Well, we admit that we have cold feet, all right!

—Attorney George Adkins, of Circleville, believes in the story that appeared recently in the press dispatches from Texas where a toad was found alive in a stone prison for 31 years where it had lived without food or water. Mr. Adkins says that years ago when he and some other men were digging in a granite "mine" they broke open a large granite stone six feet under the ground and that a live toad hopped out. The toad had evidently been held a prisoner. About the same time a petrified toad was found, perfect in shape. Horned toads, according to Texas tradition, can live in stone without food and water for years, although one scientist disputes the fact that they can exist for over two years in this way.

FUGITIVE OIL BARON TELLS OF POSSESSION

Former Head of Midwest Oil Company Sends Word to Senate Committee.

By WM. K. HUTCHINSON
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—Henry M. Blackmer, former head of the Mid-west Refining company, who fled to Europe to escape the oil trials, received $750,000 of the Continental Trading company's "slush fund," Karl C. Schuyler of Denver, his personal attorney, told the senate public lands committee today.

The bonds have been held for the two years in the vaults of the Equity Trust company of New York in the name of a joint account held by George E. Holmes, George Gordon Battle and Schuyler, the witness said. This method of keeping the bonds, Schuyler said, was decided on as a means of proving that Blackmer was not profiting from his share of the Continental bonds.

Schuyler told a dramatic story of how Blackmer returned from Europe in March, 1926, to dispose of his Continental bonds. It was the same procedure followed by James E. O'Neil, former head of the Prairie Oil and Gas company, who made a flying trip to Canada to give $800,000 of the Continental bonds to his company when he feared he was about to die.

Schuyler said Blackmer turned the bonds over to him in Montreal and that he deposited them in box 3004 at the Equity Trust company. "The bonds are there now and are intact," said Schuyler. This amazing revelation was given to the senate committee at Blackmer's own request. Schuyler told of writing Blackmer that the senate was investigating the Continental bonds and urging him to reveal his own holdings.

The deceased was well known in this city. She owned a life estate in the Zurnhaley farm in Wayne township, this county.

Albert Leroy Eldridge, who came to Pickaway county from Chicago, Pa., and who left here on Sept. 21, 1926, to serve a sentence in the Ohio reformatory at Mansfield for attempted highway robbery, is among the 100 inmates of the prison who will be granted paroles during the next three months. The announcement of Eldridge's eligibility for parole has been received by Sheriff Frank Davis from the state board of clemency.

REPORT LINDY MAY ORGANIZE NEW AIR LINE

Mysterious Trip of Famous Aviator to Detroit Starts Rumor of Project.

DETROIT, Feb. 23.—(INS)—Reports concerning organization of a New Chicago-New York Airway via Detroit to be headed by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Major Thomas G. Lanphier were circulated today with the "mystery visit" to Detroit of Lindbergh.

Flying with as much secrecy as possible, Lindbergh with four St. Louis capitalists arrived last night at Selfridge field where the party went into seclusion in Major Lanphier's quarters.

"My mission here is a purely private one and I do not wish to be interviewed," Lindbergh told a reporter over the phone.

Later Major Lanphier was asking if he and Lindbergh planned to organize the new airway as reported.

"I do not wish to say anything," Lanphier replied. "I will not deny or affirm the report."

Recent public remarks of Major Lanphier, however, lend color to reports concerning the deal.

Newspaper dispatches from Buffalo Tuesday quoted Lanphier's announcement of plans for a new Chicago-New York air line via Detroit, Buffalo and Ithaca, N. Y.

Lanphier was quoted as saying the present Bellefontaine-Cleveland route is not as safe as the proposed new route which though longer would have 70 per cent better weather.

HARD FOUGHT CONTESTS ARE AHEAD AT GYM

Walnut Township Boys Will Try to Lower Standard of 1927 Champions.

The annual Pickaway County basketball tournament will be resumed at the C. A. C. gym in Circleville at 7 o'clock Thursday night when what are expected to be four bitterly fought games will be played. Two of them will be played by boys teams and the other two by girl basketeers.

The first contest will be between the boys' quintets of Pickaway township and Williamsport. That the game will be closely contested is revealed by the fact that these rivals have met twice before this season and each has won a victory. The outcome of the fracas is a toss-up, but there is no doubt that it will be hard fought and fast played.

The next game will be between the girls' teams of Monroe township and Ashville. Monroe is expected to win by a safe margin, providing it shows more basketball than last week. Strader Barch should keep the Monroe guards busy while the Bortor twins should give the Ashville guards a busy evening.

In the third contest, New Holland is expected to defeat the Walnut boys' team, but the assignment promises to be anything but an easy task. The Walnut team will be the underdog in the mix-up, with everything to gain by defeating last year's champions, and a hammer and tongs battle should result.

In the final game of the evening, the Walnut girls will clash with the sextet from Muhlenberg township. The Walnut girls are expected to win this tussle, but in a tournament anything can happen, and in this case a real fight is the only sure thing.

Marathon Dancing Record Being Made By Weary Couples

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 23.—(INS)—A world's record for marathon dancing was being established here today as two couples, the last of a group of 29, shuffled wearily waiting for the other to drop out of the race.

The old record of 52 hours and 46 minutes was passed early this morning while four couples remained on the floor. The winner of the marathon will receive $100 in gold, according to announcements.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Feb. 23.—(INS)—Captain Malcolm Campbell, of Great Britain, will officially hold the world's speed record as a result of his 206.95 miles per hour flash across the Daytona-Ormond Beach course last Sunday.

Frank Lockhart, only American contender who was qualified in the race, was lying in a hospital suffering from shock, bruises and abdominal cuts as a result of a wild plunge into the Atlantic at 240 miles per hour yesterday.

Lockhart today said that he will repair his machine, from which he had to be cut out with blow torches by mechanics in their efforts to save him from certain death. Under his agreement with Captain Campbell, he will not try to break the record again for at least thirty days, making Campbell the official record holder.

J. A. White's triplex will probably be taken out on the course today in an effort to establish an official record if the weather clears. The triplex machine of White, claimed by its driver to be capable of 375 miles per hour, was yesterday again ruled ineligible because of the lack of proper gearing.

CITY OFFICERS SEE NEW FIRE FIGHTING

A "hot time" was enjoyed at Laurelville on Wednesday night by a number of Circleville city officials, as well as officials of a number of other towns, when they attended a fire fighting demonstration staged by the Howe Fire Engine company, makers of fire apparatus.

Among those attending from Circleville were Mayor B. T. Hedges, Safety Director Lewis Miller, Fire Chief Talmer Wise, and Councilmen Frank Baker and Frank Marlon.

A specially constructed shack was set on fire and when the flames were at their highest, chemicals were thrown on the building, and the blaze was extinguished almost at once. Two bands and a dinner at the community hall also entertained the visitors.

JUDGE UPHOLDS SENATE'S MOVE IN OIL INQUIRY

Multi-Millionaire to Prolong Fight Against Contempt By Appealing Case.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—(INS)—The writ of habeas corpus by which Col. Robert W. Stewart, multi-millionaire head of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, secured his release from arrest by the U. S. Senate two weeks ago, was dismissed today by Justice Jennings Bailey in district supreme court.

The court's action automatically remanded the oil magnate to the custody of the senate, and deputy sergeant at arms John J. McGrain was on hand to take charge of him.

Plan Appeal
Stewart's attorneys, however, immediately gave notice of appeal, and justice Bailey fixed the bond at $5,000, which was immediately posted.

Thus Stewart gains his freedom from physical detention until such time as the court of appeals passes upon his case. It is the intention of the old man's attorneys to fight the case clear to the United States supreme court, thus insuring a long drawn out legal struggle of perhaps a year's duration or more.

Decision Short
No extended opinion accompanied the court's vacation of the writ. Justice Bailey mounted his bench promptly at 10 o'clock, and within three minutes announced his decision.

"In my opinion," said the justice, "the grounds upon which the petitioner (Stewart) refused to testify (before the senate oil committee) were frivolous and without basis, and his attachment (by the senate) was justified."

Caldwell and Meeker Terwilliger, in charge of the dining room; Charles Fausnaugh and Ray Bales in charge of the kitchen; and George Littleton and S. T. Rife in charge of the refreshment kitchen.

H. W. Plum, Charles F. At the same time organ and piano music in the auditorium was provided by Miss Anna Schleyer, church organist, Ralph Barnhart, Constance Himrod and Carrie Johnson.

Marathon Dancing Record Being Made By Weary Couples

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 23.—(INS)—A world's record for marathon dancing was being established here today as two couples, the last of a group of 29, shuffled wearily waiting for the other to drop out of the race.

The old record of 52 hours and 46 minutes was passed early this morning while four couples remained on the floor. The winner of the marathon will receive $100 in gold, according to announcements.

MRS. LINCOLN IS DEAD IN ILLINOIS

Milt Morris received a telegram Wednesday, telling of the death of his sister, Mrs. Malinda Lincoln, who died Wednesday, at Rock Island, Ill., at the home of her son, Ed. Lincoln. She was 90 years of age.

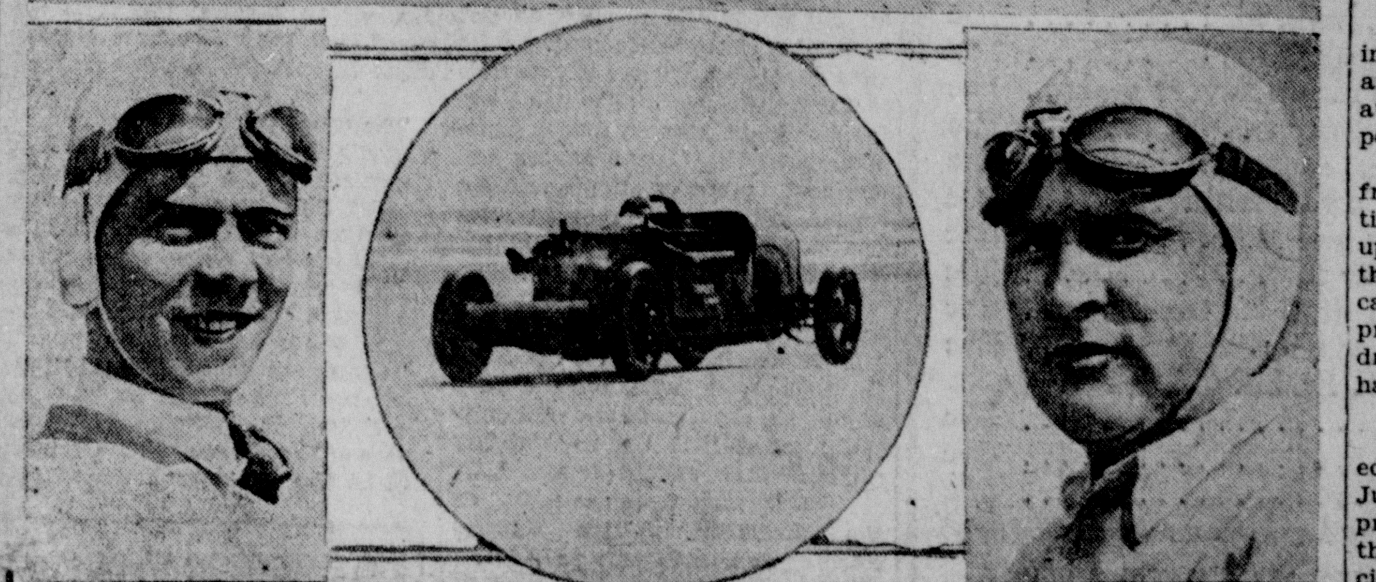

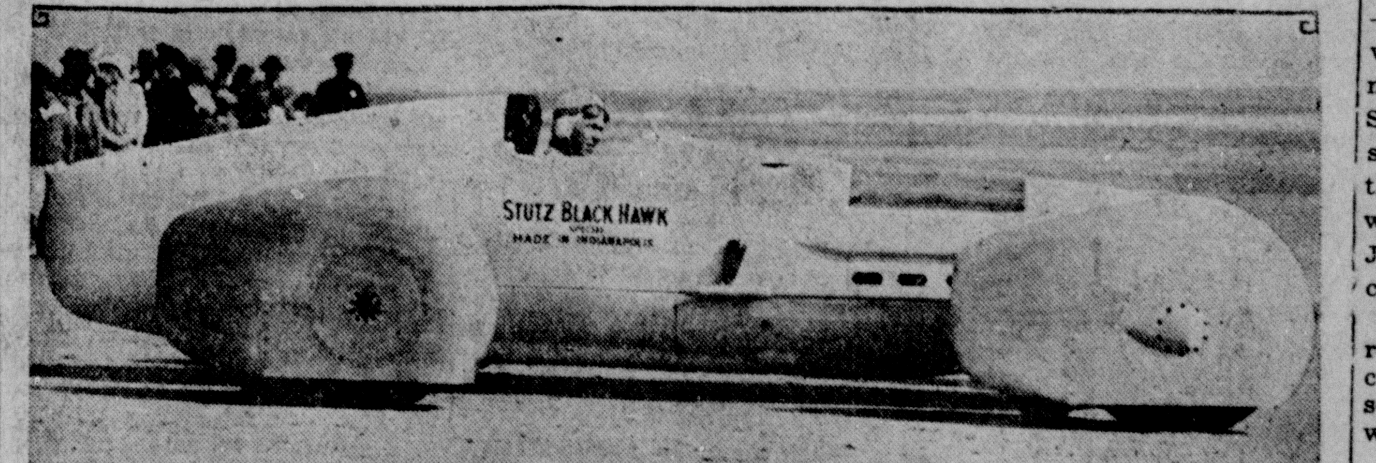

The funeral will be held Saturday at her old home in Mt. Pulaski, Illinois.

She is survived by two brothers, Milt and Lewis Morris, of Circleville, and two sisters, Mrs. Noah Warner, and Miss Sophia Morris, also of Circleville; a sister, Mrs. Rose Woolver, of Columbus, and two daughters, Mrs. Maud Bosart, of Hollywood, Calif., and Mrs. Mary Mann, of Mt. Pulaski, and one son, Ed. Lincoln, of Rock Island.

Frank Lockhart Hurt As Auto, Going 240 Miles An Hour, Plunges From Beach At Daytona Into Ocean

DAYTONA BEACH, FLA., Feb. 23.—(INS)—Captain Malcolm Campbell, of Great Britain, will officially hold the world's speed record as a result of his 206.95 miles per hour flash across the Daytona-Ormond Beach course last Sunday.

Frank Lockhart, only American contender who was qualified in the race, was lying in a hospital suffering from shock, bruises and abdominal cuts as a result of a wild plunge into the Atlantic at 240 miles per hour yesterday.

Lockhart today said that he will repair his machine, from which he had to be cut out with blow torches by mechanics in their efforts to save him from certain death. Under his agreement with Captain Campbell, he will not try to break the record again for at least thirty days, making Campbell the official record holder.

J. A. White's triplex will probably be taken out on the course today in an effort to establish an official record if the weather clears. The triplex machine of White, claimed by its driver to be capable of 375 miles per hour, was yesterday again ruled ineligible because of the lack of proper gearing.

CITY OFFICERS SEE NEW FIRE FIGHTING

A "hot time" was enjoyed at Laurelville on Wednesday night by a number of Circleville city officials, as well as officials of a number of other towns, when they attended a fire fighting demonstration staged by the Howe Fire Engine company, makers of fire apparatus.

Among those attending from Circleville were Mayor B. T. Hedges, Safety Director Lewis Miller, Fire Chief Talmer Wise, and Councilmen Frank Baker and Frank Marion.

A specially constructed shack was set on fire and when the flames were at their highest, chemicals were thrown on the building, and the blaze was extinguished almost at once. Two bands and a dinner at the community hall also entertained the visitors.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23—(INS)—"The Klan is dead—long live the Klan!"

Such was the general interpretation placed today upon the edict of Hiram W. Evans, unmasking the wearers of the white robe, and setting up in place of the old hooded order a new organization to be known as the Knights of the Great Forest.

The practical effect of the imperial ukase is to do away with the mask and continue the old Klan under the new designation. There will be three "degrees" in the Knights of the Great Forest—Klansman, Knights of Kamelia, and Knight of the Great Forest.

This first phase, he said, which had now been completed was to support and foster restricted immigration. The second phase is to work for the assimilation of aliens into American life.

George Washington's Nationalist Ideas Carried Out in Britain's Policy

LONDON Feb. 23—(UP)—George Washington has been dead for 129 years, yet this 195th anniversary of his birth finds the views which were a part of his life gradually seeping into British domestic and foreign policy.

British policy changes slowly. These changes are the result of time, not the result of any single event. At no time as at the present have Britain's statesmen walked so closely in the footsteps of America's patriot.

Nearly a century and a half ago Sun rendered life brighter, happier, more beautiful. Finally men threw off their clothes and the Sun blessed their nakedness and crowned it with golden glamor.

Sunworshippers also believe in the "selection of the fittest" by means of their culture in the nude. Their argument is: "Clean people having nothing to hide from one another."

Publications propagating the culture in the nude number by the hundreds all over Germany and there is hardly any big German city left where there is no "Ver-ein" sponsoring one or the other variety of "sun-worship."

Americans As Tactful As They Are Generous Says Duc de Trevis

PARIS, Feb. 23—(INS)—"Americans are as tactful as they are generous," writes the Duc de Trevis, President of the Societe la Sauvegarde de l'Art francais, in a recent article of a prominent art review of the capital.

"When they have full confidence in any organization, they do not demand a share in its control," he goes on to say. "Thus it was that in 1926, the Society of which I am the president formed fifteen committees in the United States and obtained more than a million francs, without any request from America for participation in the direction of this society."

The Duc de Trevis finds that special mention should be made of Mr. Bosworth, architect to John D. Rockefeller, who, on the very day of his election to the committee, learned that the ancient fief of Bois-Rame, should be saved.

Repairs were speedily made on the charming XVIIIth century dwelling and as rapidly paid for.

ELECTRICITY BURNS INFANT

LANCASTER, O., Feb. 23—Sticking a hairpin into an electric socket after he had climbed on a chair the 1½ year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Rockey caused an explosion which set the tablecloth on fire and threw him to the floor with a severely burned hand.

FOREIGN TREATIES NEW WORRY CAUSE TO PEKING RULERS

PEKING, Feb. 23—(INS) The Chinese press is beginning to speculate what action the government will take over the Sino-Italian and Sino-Portuguese commercial treaties, which it states expire this year.

Obviously the popular step would be for the government to denounce the treaties as was done in the case of Belgium and Spain, whereby those two countries were reduced to the status of non-extra-territoriality.

It is considered certain in foreign diplomatic circles that China will not follow that plan with Italy, and in all likelihood will not do so with Portugal. Italy is too much of a force to bump against for she has a strong guard in the Peking Legation, marines at Tientsin and a naval contingent in Shanghai. The Chinese leaders much prefer to bluster before nations like Belgium and Spain who are less likely to show their teeth.

Similarly in the case of Portugal there is the question of Macao, the Portuguese colony of some eleven square miles in the form of a peninsula in the delta of the Canton River. Macao was occupied by the Portugueses in 1557 and although the Chinese in 1887 formally recognized Portugal's sovereign rights to the territory, nevertheless the issue has been fraught with fric-tion.

Washington voiced his disap-proval of imperialism fostered by interlocking agreements of an international character. The British government, in its memorandum on security submitted recently to the Security Committee of the League of Nations Disarm-ament Commission, declared its opposition to multi-lateral agree-ments and expressed its prefer-ence for more agreements between nations and common interests.

How much further the British government will go in following Washington's foundation of political science in its future policy is difficult to predict, but it is as-sured that his views have already made their mark in this country.

The usual celebrations of Wash-ington's Birthday were held here today under the auspices of the English Speaking Union and other American organizations. Various individuals and American patriotic bodies placed wreaths on the monument of Washington in Tra-falgar Square.

This evening a Washington's Birthday Dinner will be held by the Union. J. A. Spender, former editor of the Westminster Gazette, will be the guest of honor.

200 Statues of Famous Men and Women Grace Small Area In London

LONDON, Feb. 23—(INS)—Two hundred famous men and women of yesteryear have statues commemorating their memory within five miles of Charing Cross the Times Square of London. Within the same distance two hundred and fifty persons of both sexes have memorial tablets hon-oring their name.

This striking fact is revealed in a newly-published work, "The Outdoor Monuments of London." Queen Victoria has four statues, most of the other Kings and Queens one each, and practically every statesman, poet, soldier, sailor, and author of nation-wide fame one.

Charles Dickens, the famous Victorian author, has no statue, but he is commemorated by six bronze plaques fixed to house in which he resided.

Americans As Tactful As They Are Generous Says Duc de Trevisé

PARIS, Feb. 23—(INS)—"Americans are as tactful as they are generous," writes the Duc de Trevisé, President of the Societe la Sauvegarde de l'Art francais, in a recent article of a prominent art review of the capital.

"When they have full confidence in any organization, they do not demand a share in its control," he goes on to say. "Thus it was that in 1926, the Society of which I am the president formed fifteen committees in the United States and obtained more than a million francs, without any request from America for participation in the direction of this society."

The Duc de Trevisé finds that special mention should be made of Mr. Bosworth, architect to John D. Rockefeller, who, on the very day of his election to the committee, learned that the ancient fief of Bois-Rame, should be saved. Repairs were speedily made on the charming XVIIIth century dwelling and as rapidly paid for.

Washington warned his compatriots against "entangling alliances." Less than a year ago, Sir Austen Chamberlain, Foreign Minister of Great Britain, warned the League of Nations that his country could go no further than the Locarno Pact.

For years Washington preached, taught and practiced American "nationalism." Two years ago, the British government summoned the representatives of its dominions overseas and later the representative of its colonies to bind the British Empire closer into what has become the "British Commonwealth of Nations"—each working for the ultimate good of the other and the whole.

Washington, throughout his life opposed any policy which might lead to the United States being embroiled in unnecessary and irrelevant controversies. At the September session of the Assembly of the League of Nations, Chamberlain sharply warned the various nations against attempts to disrupt the British Empire in their formulation of the international schemes and intrigues.

Washington voiced his disapproval of imperialism fostered by interlocking agreements of an international character. The British government, in its memorandum on security submitted recently to the Security Committee of the League of Nations Disarmament Commission, declared its opposition to multi-lateral agreements and expressed its preference for more agreements between nations and common interests.

How much further the British government will go in following Washington's foundation of political science in its future policy is difficult to predict, but it is assured that his views have already made their mark in this country.

The usual celebrations of Washington's Birthday were held here today under the auspices of the English Speaking Union and other American organizations. Various individuals and American patriotic bodies placed wreaths on the monument of Washington in Trafalgar Square.

This evening a Washington's Birthday Dinner will be held by the Union. J. A. Spender, former editor of the Westminster Gazette, will be the guest of honor.

FOREIGN TREATIES NEW WORRY CAUSE TO PEKING RULERS

PEKING, Feb. 23—(INS) The Chinese press is beginning to speculate what action the government will take over the Sino-Italian and Sino-Portuguese commercial treaties, which it states expire this year.

Obviously the popular step would be for the government to denounce the treaties as was done in the case of Belgium and Spain, whereby those two countries were reduced to the status of non-extrajurisdictional.

It is considered certain in foreign diplomatic circles that China will not follow that plan with Italy, and in all likelihood will not do so with Portugal. Italy is too much of a force to bump against for she has a strong guard in the Peking Legation, marines at Tientsin and a naval contingent in Shanghai. The Chinese leaders much prefer to bluster before nations like Belgium and Spain who are less likely to show their teeth.

Similarly in the case of Portugal there is the question of Macao, the Portuguese colony of some eleven square miles in the form of a peninsula in the delta of the Canton River. Macao was occupied by the Portuguese in 1557 and although the Chinese in 1887 formally recognized Portugal's sovereign rights to the territory, nevertheless the issue has been fraught with friction.

200 Statues of Famous Men and Women Grace Small Area In London

LONDON, Feb. 23—(INS)—Two hundred famous men and women of yesteryear have statues commemorating their memory within five miles of Charing Cross the Times Square of London. Within the same distance two hundred and fifty persons of both sexes have memorial tablets honoring their name.

This striking fact is revealed in a newly-published work, "The Outdoor Monuments of London." Queen Victoria has four statues, most of the other Kings and Queens one each, and practically every statesman, poet, soldier, sailor, and author of nation-wide fame one.

Charles Dickens, the famous Victorian author, has no statue, but he is commemorated by six bronze plaques fixed to house in which he resided.

When a Man Loves

clearly expressed his rising anger at being duped by them both and disillusioned by Manon.

The Governor was amazed into stunned silence. To think that Fabien had tricked them all by a lie. He blamed himself as an utter fool for having respected the so called holy bonds of matrimony.

It took Synnelet to break the silence. "That is good," he said, stepping forward. "That is very good, Monsieur; and now that we know the truth," he continued, turning to his Uncle, "There is no reason why I cannot have her."

"Right, my boy," replied the Governor slowly nodding his head to the nephew he never denied, then turning to Fabien with a slightly puzzled expression he said, "Since the girl is not your wife, she is my property, and shall be given to my nephew."

Fabien tightened his grasp around Manon's shoulders. His own stupidity had brought their dream castle tumbling about their ears. But he would not give her up. He had gone through much for her sake and was now ready to lay down his life if it would help her.

As Synnelet came forward to claim his new property, Manon cried out in terror and Fabien leaped at him like a madman. His hands went about Synnelet's throat. With a roar of pent up anger the Captain hurled himself upon Fabien and forced him back against the wall where he held him until reinforced by two husky sailors who had been hastily summoned by the Governor.

"I am sorry, sir," Fabien admitted to the Captain. "Let me explain—I am sure you will understand!"

"Throw this mad fool in with convicts," ordered the Captain. As the sailors bore him toward the door he fought madly like one possessed as he saw Synnelet struggling to take Manon into his arms.

The odds against Fabien were too great and he was thrown through the open hatch into the hold below. He fell upon the reeking, naked bodies of the half crazed convicts, and lay sprawled in their midst, unconscious from the impact of his fall.

"Marry you!" exploded the Captain. "You told me two months ago that you were man and wife!"

The Governor, who had been sitting with an astonished look upon his face, half rose from his seat as he asked, "Do you mean to tell me that you two are not married?"

Fabien's face must have expressed the consternation that swept over him, for he felt Manon shrink close to him and her quick convulsive grasp on his arm brought a full realization of his mistake. In the joyous thoughts of the new life that was opening for them, he had utterly forgotten his previous statement made to the Captain weeks before.

There was nothing to do now but face the situation. Fabien held Manon's hand more tightly and answered calmly, "No, we were not married, but we love each other and wish you to marry us before we land."

For a full moment there was a deep silence. Across the Captain's face one emotion after another

Manon was more terrified for Fabien's safety than for her own welfare. Her newly found love had completely shut out her former selfishness. It did not matter, now, what happened to her as long as Fabien was safe.

Sobbing—half hysterical—she struggled to leave the cabin. She wanted to follow the Captain and plead for Fabien. The old seaman had been so splendid to her that she did not realize how utterly hopeless any appeal would be since he was amazed of their deceptions. He sacrifice that she could make would soften him enough to have Fabien removed from the hold of the ship. But Manon did not know this—she was sure the Captain would do as she wished and she fought madly to get by Synnelet who laughed and smiled in anticipated satisfaction and bared his way.

Manon's tiny fists beat hopelessly upon his chest but he smiled in delight. He was much pleased with Manon and her fiery temper amused him greatly. Certainly it was an indication that his conquest would not be an easy one. However, that only added zest to his purpose. She was his property—there would be no opposition and he could take his time about taming her into sweet submission.

The Governor was well pleased with the situation. Before leaving the cabin he paused a moment and looked back at Manon as she struggled against Synnelet's advances; but he only smiled indulgently, shrugged his shoulders nonchalantly and walked away without interfering. It was no longer his affair. He had done his part, besides was he not young once, himself, and the hot blood of youth must be served.

Wildly and more fiercely Manon continued her struggle to escape from Synnelet, but with each effort her strength weakened. Her gown was torn and her gorgeous golden curls, sadly disheveled, were spread about her half-naked shoulders like a golden halo of sunshine.

The nearness of Manon had aroused a passion within Synnelet that was fast getting beyond his desire to control. He had played with his beautiful new toy just as long as he could. Suddenly he seized her, brushed aside her arms and crushing her to him, kissed her madly.

Vainly Manon worked to free herself. Synnelet's burning kisses covered her neck and shoulders. His hard labored breathing fairly smothered her as she strove to turn her head away so that he could not find her lips. Then she felt herself lifted, bodily, in his hateful arms and carried across the cabin. Vaguely she sensed the easing of her body upon the couch and saw Synnelet's face strangely grotesque, as he leaned over her. Through a mist of tears his countenance seemed to become more and more indistinct. Shortly it disappeared entirely and Manon knew no more. She had fainted.

With the return of consciousness, Fabien sat up. His clothes were torn and his face and hands were covered with blood. He had not been stunned for very long because overhead he saw the sailors securely battening down the hatch cover through which he had been dropped.

It was a dark, gloomy hold into which he had been thrown, literally sinking with sweat and filth. Above the dim rays of a ship's lantern enabled him to discern the convicts, scores of them, chained like animals to stanchions in the ship's beam.

They stared at him curiously. His sudden advent in their midst had aroused them, for a moment, from their apathy of despair into which days of confinement in their foul quarters had cast them. One or two of the men laughed—meaningless laughs inspired by crazed minds.

Still in a half daze Fabien gazed around and became conscious of their curiosity, their mocking voices and the clang of their chains. It all tended to bring back a swift remembrance of his fate. Like a madman he lurched to his feet and climbed up the iron grating to the locked hatch above where he pounded, vainly. It was useless. His bruised hands were but puny instruments for the giant task. Even his shoulders pressed with all his strength failed to make any impression. It was hopeless. He was unequal to the task. With a groan of despair he descended into the hold, fell back on the floor and buried his head in his hands.

JACK KUBELIK SEES MENACE TO MUSIC IN "JAZZ" DISEASE

LONDON, Feb. 23.—(INS)—"Jazz has swept over the world like some horrible death-dealing disease; but it will go as suddenly as it came."

Jan Kubelik, the world-famous violinist, gave this as his considered opinion in an interview here, during which he violently assailed all jazz music, declaring that it is a step backwards in the musical influence of mankind.

"Never has a more lowly, sensual assault been made upon the ears of music-lovers than in this jazz," Kubelik said. "It is worse than bad literature; it is, in its immediate effects, worse than any dope or drug."

"But jazz will go as suddenly as it came. Steadily education is enlightening more and more minds in each succeeding generation, so that we are always making progress in our knowledge and appreciation of art. Therefore jazz must go, for it is a giant step backwards, over the heads of great masters, to that period when our knowledge of music was elemental."

"It came, drumming, reverberant, appealing, provoking, irritating the lowest of human instincts. Because of that it will go, withered and spent, before the bright light of truth."

Love's Embers Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

By Adele Garrison

Katie Takes Charge of the "Pirate Steak" Ceremony.

I LAUGHED at Lillian's prediction of the stuffed, torpid condition which would be the lot of all the partakers of the "pirate steak" dinner which was to be the chief feature of our beach party. But I knew that her prophecy was not a greatly exaggerated one, and that the members of the animated group who had begun the day's enjoyment by swimming, canoeing and lunching at the bay, and who had then driven to our favorite camping place upon the ocean beach, would be valiant trenchermen at the camp dinner, which our family at least considered the most appetizing of all outdoor meals.

The spot to which we brought our guests is a wide stretch of wonderful white sandy beach with curving high dunes at the back and sides, making an ideal shelter. It is so far from the bathing beaches and the beaten track that we are almost always assured of privacy and in the lee of one of the dunes we have piled stones and bricks for use in our outdoor cookery.

Katie, with the tremendous responsibility of her office as director of the feast heavy upon her, gave the pile of stones an anxious inspection when we reached the spot.

"Goot ting! I brought me some extra bricks," she muttered. "Some root for noting bounch soup greens steel some of dese."

No one ventured to dispute her, although we were amusedly skeptical of her accusation of theft of the worthless bricks and stones. But those of us who have partaken of the pirate steaks which Katie, with the aid of "Dot Jeem," her good-natured patient, and wonderfully efficient husband, has served to us, know to her skill and helping our breaths do not venture to irritate her while the meal is in progress.

"Goot ting lots of young mans here," Katie said next, casting a speculative eye upon Dicky, young Jackson and Noel Yritzon. "Me, I need lots of vood."

"Why don't you say me, Katie?" Junior demanded excitedly. "I always carry lots of driftwood, you know I do."

"Sure ting," she responded, beaming at him. "You get best kind vut Katie likes. But com now every-body, make eet snappy. I vant first batch of vood here in five—ten meenits. Den you gr-back for some more."

I wondered if Lillian caught as I did the startled glance which Eleanor Lincoln sent young Mr. Jackson, and the arching eyebrows of his returning look. It was an exchange of glances which set the two apart some way, subtly betrayed that this rustic merry-making with everybody gathering driftwood at the beach of a serving maid, was something absolutely beyond their experience and understanding.

But beyond that first involuntary exchange of glances, they let no hint of their surprise escape them, and the next minute saw Dicky, Junior, Marion, Mary, Miss Lincoln and young Mr. Jackson racing down the beach in search of the driftwood which is the first requisite for our beach dinners.

"How about it, Phil?" Lillian challenged as she and I came up to the chair and umbrella which Otto, under his master's direction, was arranging in the shelter of a dune for Mother Graham. "Are you going to ruin your youth by gathering driftwood with me?"

When a Man Loves

By ALICE LOWE MILES

Copyright 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
John Barrymore in "WHEN A MAN LOVES" is a Warner Bros. Production of this novel.

Clearly expressed his vision, at being duped by them both and disillusioned by Manon.

The Governor was amazed into stunned silence. He thought that Fabien had tricked them all by a lie. He blamed himself as an utter fool for having respected the so called holy bonds of matrimony.

It took Synnelet to break the silence. "That is good," he said, stepping forward. "That is very good, Monsieur; and that we know the truth," he continued, turning to his Uncle. "There is no reason why I cannot have her."

"Right, my boy," replied the Governor slowly nodding his head to the nephew he never denied, then turning to Fabien with a slightly puzzled expression he said, "Since the girl is not your wife, she is any man's property, and shall be given to my nephew."

Fabien tightened his grasp around Manon's shoulders. His own stupidity had brought their dream castle tumbling about their ears. But he would not give her up. He had gone through much for her sake and was now ready to lay down his life if it would help her.

As Synnelet came forward to claim his new property, Manon cried out in terror and Fabien leaped at him like a madman. His hands went about Synnelet's throat. With a roar of pent up anger the Captain hurled himself upon Fabien and forced him back against the wall where he held him until reinforced by two husky sailors who had been hastily summoned by the Governor.

"I am sorry, sir," Fabien admitted to the Captain. "Let me explain—I am sure you will understand." "Throw this mad fool in with the convicts," ordered the Captain. As the sailors bore him toward the door he fought madly like one possessed as he saw Synnelet struggling to take Manon into his arms.

The odds against Fabien were too great and he was thrown through the open hatch into the hold below. He fell upon the reeking, naked bodies of the half crazed convicts, and lay sprawled in their midst, unconscious from the impact of his fall.

CHAPTER XX

Manon was more terrified for Fabien's safety than for her own welfare. Her newly found love had completely shut out her former selfishness. It did not matter now, what happened to her as long as Fabien was safe.

Sobbing—half hysterical—she struggled to leave the cabin. She wanted to follow the Captain and plead for Fabien. The old seaman had been so kind to her that she did not realize how utterly hopeless any appeal would be since he was accused of their deceptions. He sacrificed that she could make would soften him enough to have Fabien removed from the hold of the ship. But Manon did not know this—she was sure the Captain would do as she wished and she fought madly to get by Synnelet who laughed and smiled in anticipated satisfaction and bared his way.

Manon's tiny fists beat hopelessly upon his chest but he smiled in delight. He was much pleased with Manon and her fiery temper amused him greatly. Certainly it was an indication that his conquest would not be an easy one. However, that only added zest to his purpose. She was his property—there would be no opposition and he could take his time about taming her into sweet submission.

The Governor was well pleased with the situation. Before leaving the cabin he paused a moment and looked back at Manon as she struggled against Synnelet's advances; but he only smiled indulgently, shrugged his shoulders nonchalantly and walked away without interfering. It was no longer his affair. He had done his part, besides was he not young once, himself, and the hot blood of youth must be served.

Wildly and more fiercely Manon continued her struggle to escape from Synnelet, but with each effort her strength weakened. Her gown was torn and her gorgeous golden curls, sadly disheveled, were spread about her half naked shoulders like a golden halo of sunshine.

The nearness of Manon had aroused a passion within Synnelet that was fast getting beyond his desire to control. He had played with his beautiful new toy just as long as he could. Suddenly he seized her, brushed aside her arms and crushing her to him, kissed her madly.

Vainly Manon worked to free herself. Synnelet's burning kisses covered her neck and shoulders. His hard labored breathing fairly smothered her as she strove to turn her head away so that he could not find her lips. Then she felt herself lifted, bodily, in his hateful arms and carried across the cabin. Vaguely she sensed the easing of her body upon the couch and saw Synnelet's face strangely grotesque, as he leaned over her. Through a mist of tears his countenance seemed to become more and more indistinct. Shortly it disappeared entirely and Manon knew no more. She had fainted.

With the return of consciousness, Fabien sat up. His clothes were torn and his face and hands were covered with blood. He had not been stunned for very long because overhead he saw the sailors securely battening down the hatch cover through which he had been dropped. It was a dark, gloomy hold into which he had been thrown, literally stinking with sweat and filth. Above the dim rays of a ship's lantern he saw a faint light that enabled him to discern the convicts, scores of them, chained like animals to stanchions in the ship's beam.

They stared at him curiously. His sudden advent in their midst had aroused them, for a moment, from their apathy of despair into which days of confinement in their foul quarters had cast them. One or two of the men laughed—meaningless laughs inspired by crazed minds.

Still in a half daze Fabien gazed around and became conscious of their curiosity, their mocking voices and the clang of their chains. It all tended to bring back a swift remembrance of his fate. Like a madman he lurched to his feet and climbed up the iron grating to the locked hatch above where he pounded, vainly. It was useless. His bruised hands were but puny instruments for the giant task. Even his shoulders pressed with all his strength failed to make any impression. It was hopeless. He was unequal to the task. With a groan of despair he descended into the hold, fell back on the floor and buried his head in his hands. (To be continued.)

OVERCOME BY LEGACY

LODZ, POLAND, Feb. 23.—(INS)—Stanislaw Agnaciak, an unemployed factory worker, suffered a severe heart attack today when he was informed that he had fallen heir to $12,000,000 from an uncle who died in New York. He is expected to recover, however.

—Some girls seem to have a great deal of music in them and the neighbors are always sorry when any of it escapes.

JACK KUBELIK SEES MENACE TO MUSIC IN "JAZZ" DISEASE

LONDON, Feb. 23.—(INS)—"Jazz has swept over the world like some horrible death-dealing disease; but it will go as suddenly as it came."

Jan Kubelik, the world-famous violinist, gave this as his considered opinion in an interview here, during which he violently assailed all jazz music, declaring that it is a step backwards in the musical influence of mankind.

"Never has a more lowly, sensual assault been made upon the ears of music-lovers than in this jazz," Kubelik said. "It is worse than bad literature; it is, in its immediate effects, worse than any dope or drug."

"But jazz will go as suddenly as it came. Steadily education is enlightening more and more minds in each succeeding generation, so that we are always making progress in our knowledge and appreciation of art. Therefore jazz must go, for it is a giant step backwards, over the heads of great masters, to that period when our knowledge of music was elemental."

"It came, drumming, reverberant, appalling, provoking, irritating the lowest of human instincts. Because of that it will go, withered and spent, before the bright light of truth."

Katie Takes Charge of the "Pirate Steak" Ceremony.

I LAUGHED at Lillian's prediction of the stuffed, torpid condition which would be the lot of all the partakers of the "pirate steak" dinner which was to be the chief feature of our beach party. But I knew that her prophecy was not a greatly exaggerated one, and that the members of the animated group who had begun the day's enjoyment by swimming, canoeing and lunching at the bay, and who had then driven to our favorite camping place upon the ocean beach, would be valiant trenchermen at the camp dinner, which our family at least considered the most appealing of all outdoor meals.

The spot to which we brought our guests is a wide stretch of wonderful white sandy beach with curving high dunes at the back and sides, making an ideal shelter. It is so far from the bathing beaches and the beaten track that we are almost always assured of privacy and in the lee of one of the dunes we have piled stones and bricks for use in our outdoor cookery.

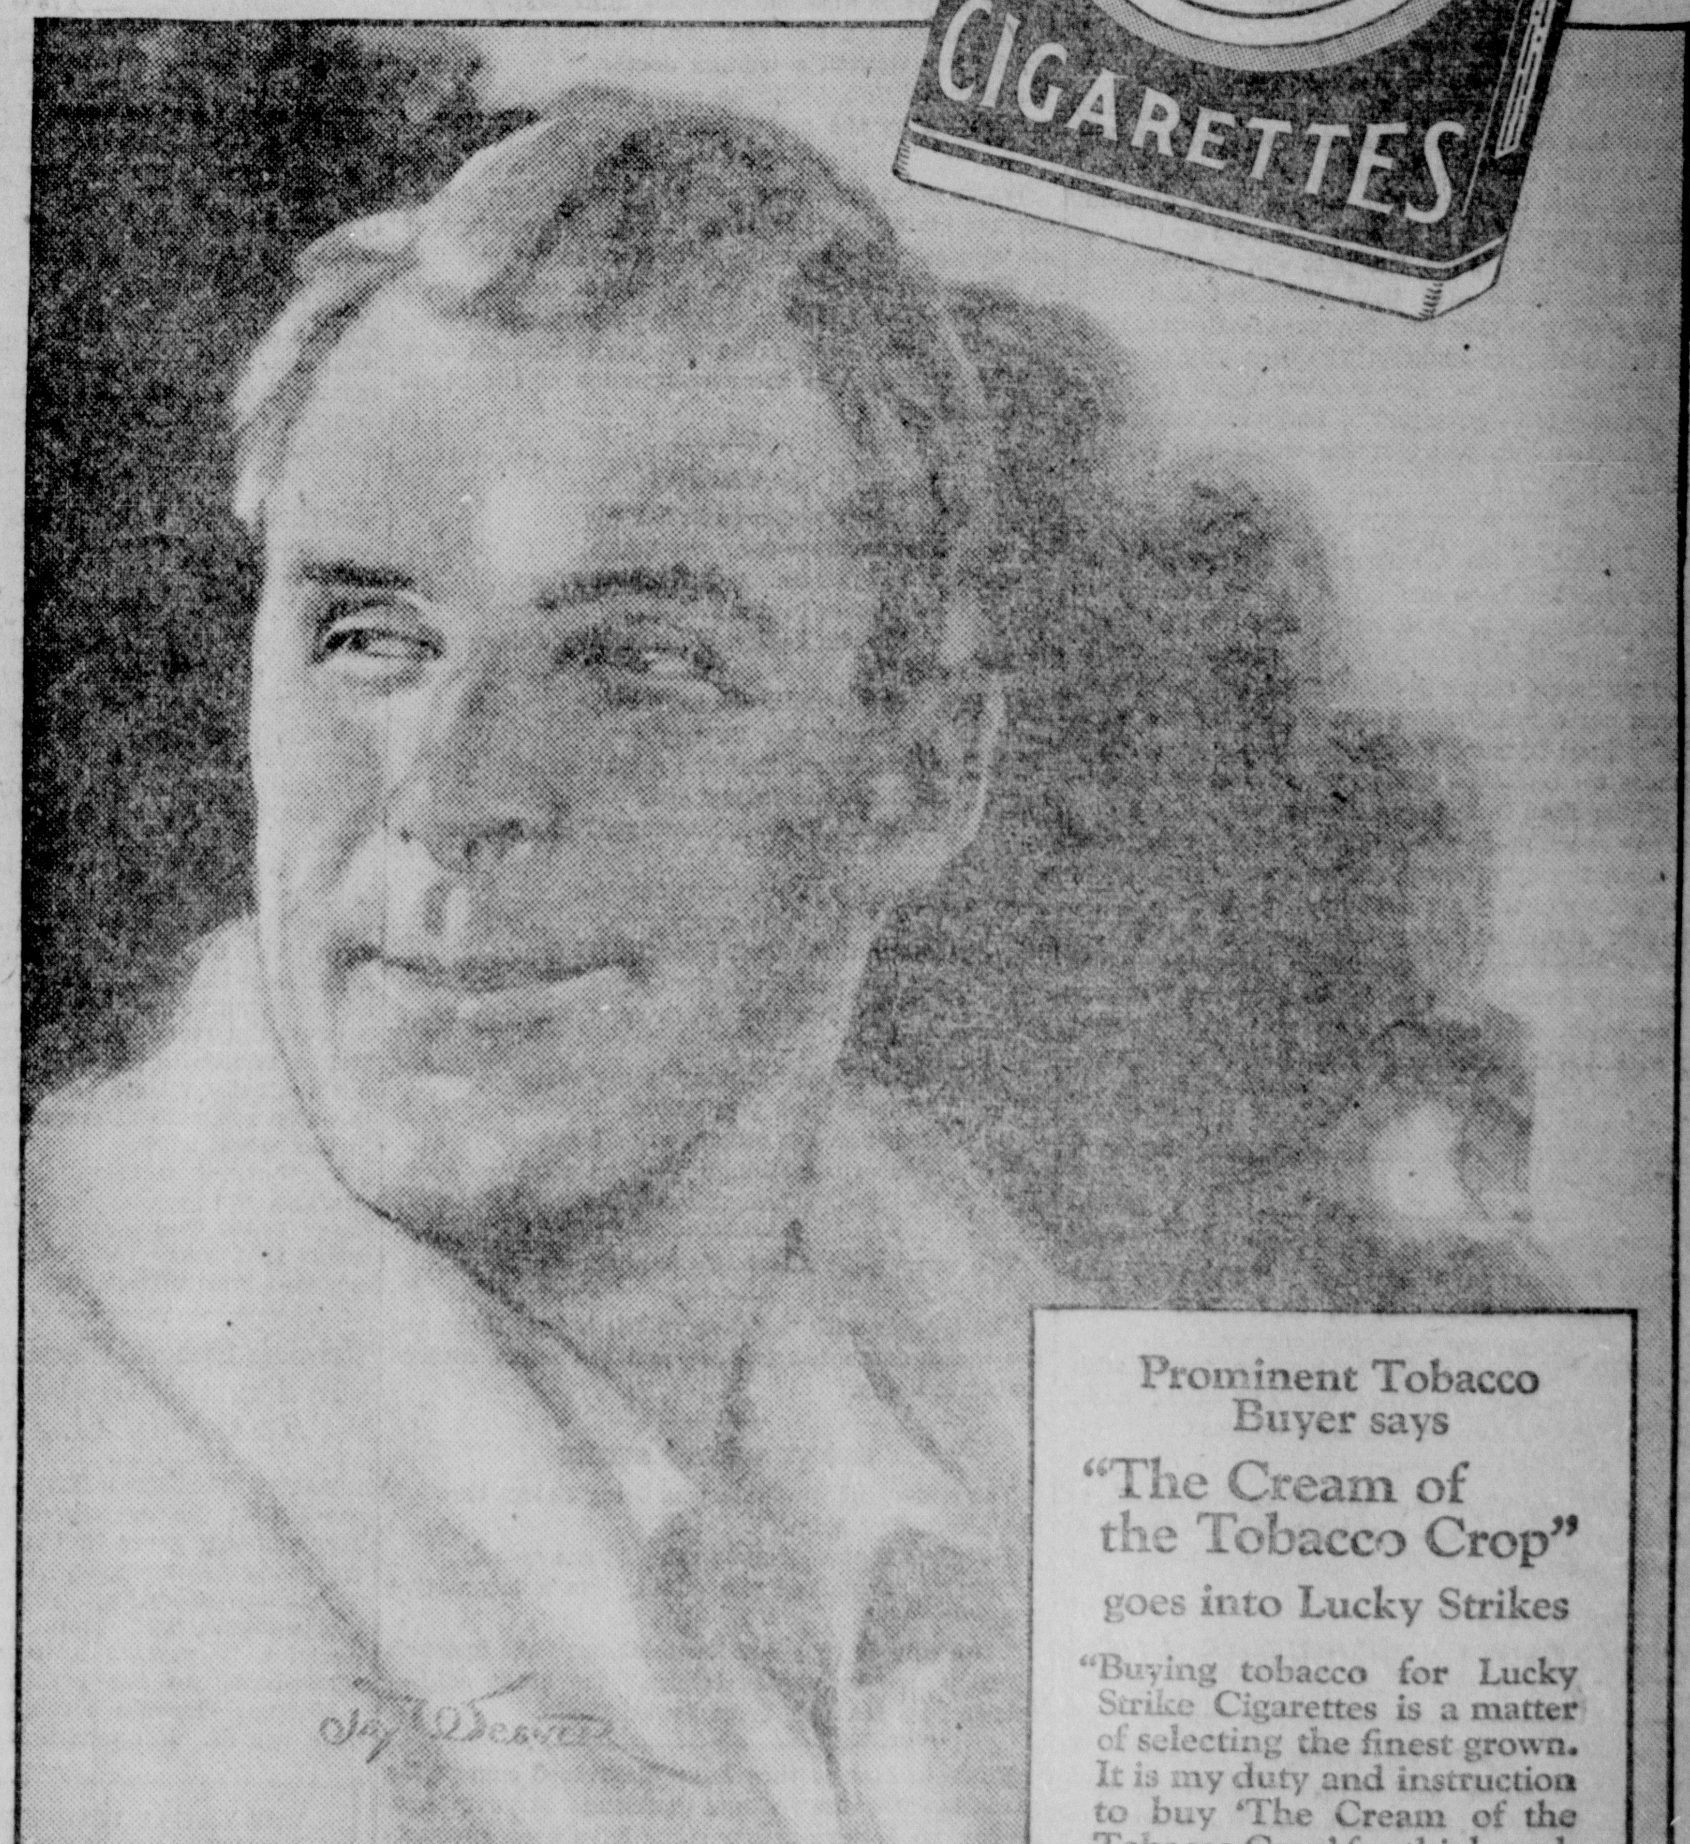

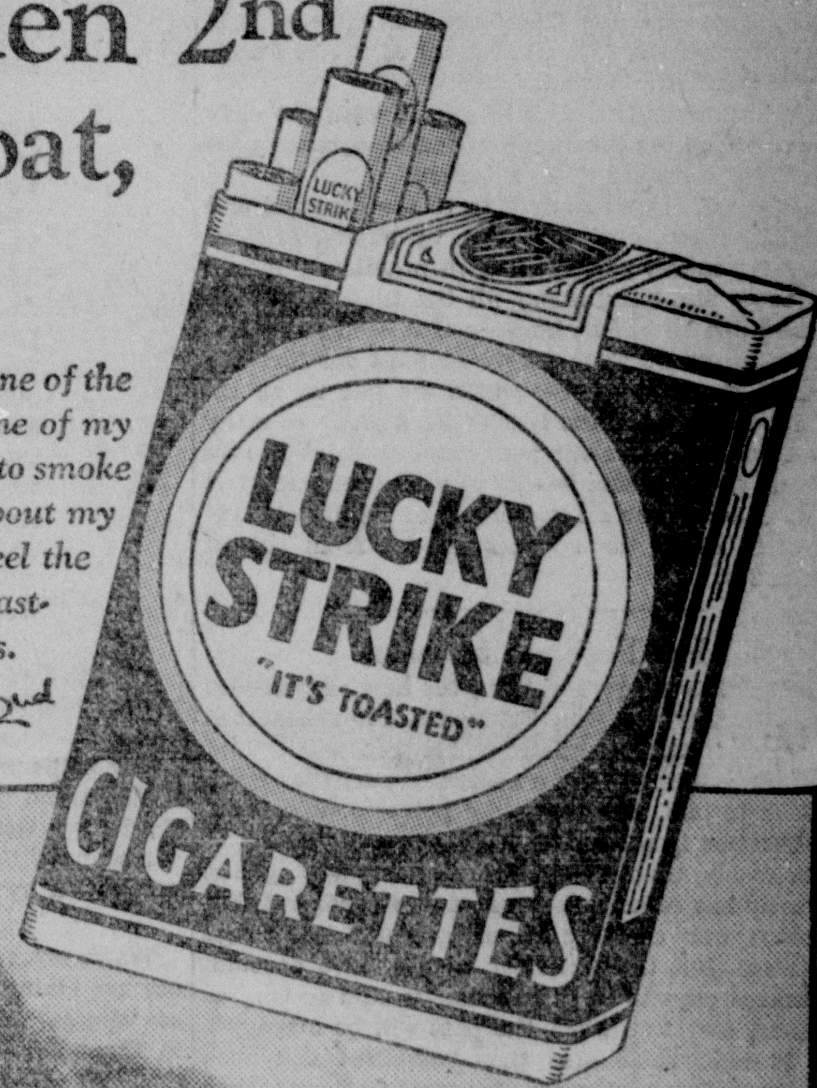

Katie, with the tremendous responsibility of her office as director of the feast heavy upon her, gave the pile of stones an anxious inspection when we reached the spot. "Goot ting I brought me some extra bricks," she muttered. "Some goot for noting bonch soup greens steal some of dese."

No one ventured to dispute her, although we were amusedly skeptical of her accusation of theft of the worthless bricks and stones. But those of us who have partaken of the pirate steaks which Katie, with the aid of "Dot Jeem," her good-natured patient, and wonderfully efficient husband, has served to us, know to her skill and helpfulness.

PRAYER—Blessed is the man unto whom the Lord imputeth no iniquity and in whose spirit there is no guile.

The Community Ties.

All over the country the effort is made in progressive towns, to develop a feeling of loyalty to one's home community. People are urged to take a pride in the place where they live, to support its enterprises, and work for its progress.

The greatest obstacle in the way of this feeling, is the shifting character of population. Where formerly the great majority of people would live for many years or all their life in one town, now a multitude of them move around from place to place.

The community gives every resident advantages inherited from the past. Whatever it has of beauty, educational benefits, social institutions, opportunities for pleasant diversions, is handed on as a result of the past and present effort of the people of such a place.

Whether we are old residents or new ones, it seems ungrateful and ungracious not to make a return for these benefits. The very least we can do is to consider ourselves loyal citizens of the community where we are located.

This loyalty calls for us to join in with the civic movements of the community, and co-operate with the efforts for further development.

It also calls us to contribute to the financial and industrial stability of the town, by buying of local dealers whenever possible, which practically means in a town like ours, about all the time. Whatever we need can be had at home, and it seems the business interests which make possible the comfort, the luxuries, the advantages, which we get in an attractive home town like Circleville. There are many reasons why it is for our personal advantage to support our own business in this way. But such support is also called for as an expression of loyalty and appreciation of all the benefits we get from such a community.

Far Feelings Subside.

President Coolidge, receiving the new ambassador from Germany, Dr. von Prittwitz, remarked that the present friendly relations between the United States and Germany are a source of particular gratification to him, and that they point to permanent collaboration in the paths of peace.

The feeling that existed here 10 years ago against Germany has faded out. Then it was predicted that Germans who came to America would get rough treatment. But the American people have concluded that it pays to be magnanimous, and so long as Germany starts no wars, the past will be forgotten.

It is remarkable also that travellers find such friendly feeling in that country for Americans. They seem to admire our country. The best way to show that admiration is to resolve never again to allow their country to be governed by kings and emperors, who were the ones who got the world into trouble in 1914.

Limited on Campaign Funds.

A resolve has been offered in the United States senate, that would prohibit candidates for that body to spend more than $25,000 on their campaign. While public sentiment seems to demand a reasonable limit on such costs, yet the limit could not be the same for all states. It must cost far more for reasonable expenses to reach the voters in the big and populous states, than in the smaller ones.

Money spent in elections is as elusive as the wind that blows through the cornfields. A candidate might not spend a nickel himself, and yet his friends might distribute a million. They could see to it that he knew nothing about it. Meanwhile something could be done by defining the purposes for which money can be legitimately expended, and of course it might help some to fix a reasonable sum that could be used.

I SAID TO ME

I SAID to Me
"Well, I'm afraid
I cannot do the job,"
I said to me
And all the while
Emitting a dire
Sob,
To me the task
A giant seemed
And filled
Up with dismay
I thought I'd surely
Lost my chance
To win my Goal
That day,
And then to me
I said, "Well, son,
You'll never win
Like that."
And so I jumped
Into the fray
Discarding coat
And hat,
The job that once
Seemed hopeless
When my heart
Within me
Quailed
And I was sunken
In my soul
And thought that I had failed,
Now soon was done
And I have won
Because I stuck
To it
And didn't grow
Discouraged
Or decide to throw
A fit—

And what we mean to say
Is,
You, too, can talk to
"Me," and say
You'll do your very Best
And not become a
Lazy bird and make Yourself a pest,
Just say to me, "Well,
Soon I'll win
The goal which I Would seek,"
And sun will shine

JAPANESE POLICY IN CHINA IS CAUSE OF CONTINUED FEELING

TOKIO, Feb. 23.—(INS).—Unless Japan changes her policies toward China continuation of friendly relations between these two great Oriental nations will be jeopardized, in the opinion of Lieutenant General Rihachiro Banzai, for 25 years military advisor to the Peking government. General Banzai recently resigned his office and returned to Japan to live but he is devoting much time to efforts to bring about better relations between China and Japan.

The attitude on the part of Japan which General Banzai deems ill-advised is that of sending battleships and troops to China when there is trouble there. Such a policy, he declared, does not serve any useful purpose and it arouses resentment among the Chinese that reacts against Japan and the Japanese residents of China in other ways.

General Banzai is not optimistic that chaotic China soon will be restored to order. What is needed to accomplish that, he believes, is the emergence of a capable statesman like he late Yuan Shih-kai. No such saviors of the country is to be found among the present crop of so-called Chinese leaders, according to the general.

Communism is not attractive to the Chinese, General Banzai asserted.

THRILLS AROUND IN "WEST POINT"

Film at Metropolitan Theater
Stars William Haines in Leading Role.

The spectacular dress parade at West Point, drills and other details of cadet life are seen in a story of intimate life among the cadets, with Haines as one of their number. The big thrill comes in a reproduction of the annual Army-Navy game, and is one of the most elaborately staged sequences in the picture, most of which was taken at the academy itself.

Haines, with Joan Crawford as his leading lady and a large cast, journeyed to West Point from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios to film these scenes in the big production, as well as the scenes filmed on the Hudson River, in which the famous steamer "De Witt Clinton" was used. Edward Sedgwick directed the new picture from an original story by Raymond L. Schrock.

Victim's Relatives Make Charges of Negligence By Wrecked Ship's Crew

GENEVA, Feb. 22.—(INS).—Charges of negligence on the part of the crew of the Italian liner Principessa Mafalda in rescuing passengers when the vessel sank off South America last fall are being revived here by the Bernese Bund.

The newspaper quotes a statement by the sister of a Swiss victim of the disaster, in which more than 300 lives were lost. The Bund says that this girl questioned surviving passengers and members of the crew, and that two Italian friends of her brother told her that the officers and crew of the ship made no attempt to help in the rescue work.

Further than this, the girl charges, the passengers had to lower boats themselves, with the result that many of them were capsized with all aboard.

That you had thought
Were bleak.

We've often wondered what kind of biscuits the women who play bridge make, if any.

Our memory goes back to the time, dreams Bob Ryder, when if a girl had had neuritis in her knee she'd have wanted a woman doctor.

And now, Bob, you'd be surprised where they're vaccinated by the male doctors.

We've often wondered whether the modern mothers are giving their little girls modern dolls and, if so, whether they have the same amount of sawdust in them they used to have when we cut off their china heads and dissected their proportions in true Hickman style, letting the sawdust trickle all over the heavy carpet to the consternation of the heads of the house.

NOTHINGS

I'd whisper nothings in her ear
Like zephyrs from the South,
But I'm refraining through the fear
Of tresses in my mouth.
—Charlie Leedy, Youngstown Telegram.

I'd whisper nothings in her ear,
At kissing her I'd try,
But I'm afraid that she might strike
And hit me in my eye.
—Adam Breede, Hastings, Neb. Tribune.

I'd whisper nothings in her ear,
Like some true godly saint,
But one thing that I don't hold dear
Is rouge or drug store paint.
—Norman W. Ralston, this column.

Well, whisper nothings in my ear,
I really wish you would,
Unless you can convince me, Dear,
You've somethings "just as good."
—Haith, Lady from West Palm Beach.

The worst part about life is getting used to it.

The trouble with the divorce evil is that there are too many contented fathers and too many discontented mothers.

TODAY'S BEST STORY

The sweet girl graduate was being shown through the locomotive shop.

"What is that enormous thing?" she asked.
"That," explained the guide, "is a locomotive boiler."

"And why do they boil locomotives?" she insisted.
"To make the engine tender," the guide said.—Selected by HARRY from Paper Wads.

JAPANESE POLICY IN CHINA IS CAUSE OF CONTINUED FEELING

TOKIO, Feb. 23.—(INS).—Unless Japan changes her policies toward China continuation of friendly relations between these two great Oriental nations will be jeopardized, in the opinion of Lieutenant General Rihachiro Banzai, for 25 years military advisor to the Peiping government. General Banzai recently resigned his office and returned to Japan to live but he is devoting much time to efforts to bring about better relations between China and Japan.

The attitude on the part of Japan which General Banzai deems ill-advised is that of sending battleships and troops to China when there is trouble there. Such a policy, he declared, does not serve any useful purpose and it arouses resentment among the Chinese that reacts against Japan and the Japanese residents of China in other ways.

General Banzai is not optimistic that chaotic China soon will be restored to order. What is needed to accomplish that, he believes, is the emergence of a capable statesman like he late Yuan Shik-kai. No such savior of the country is to be found among the present crop of so-called Chinese leaders, according to the general.

Communism is not attractive to the Chinese, General Banzai asserted.

THRILLS ABOUND IN "WEST POINT"

Film at Metropolitan Theater
Stars William Haines In Leading Role.

The spectacular dress parade at West Point, drills and other details of cadet life are seen in a story of intimate life among the cadets, with Haines as one of their number. The big thrill comes in a reproduction of the annual Army-Navy game, and is one of the most elaborately staged sequences in the picture, most of which was taken at the academy itself.

Haines, with Joan Crawford as his leading lady and a large cast, journeyed to West Point from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios to film these scenes in the big production, as well as the scenes filmed on the Hudson River, in which the famous steamer "De Witt Clinton" was used. Edward Sedgwick directed the new picture from an original story by Raymond L. Schrock.

Victim's Relatives Make Charges of Negligence By Wrecked Ship's Crew

GENEVA, Feb. 22.—(INS).—Charges of negligence on the part of the crew of the Italian liner Principessa Mafalda in rescuing passengers when the vessel sank off South America last fall are being revived here by the Bernese Bund.

The newspaper quotes a statement by the sister of a Swiss victim of the disaster, in which more than 300 lives were lost. The Bund says that this girl questioned surviving passengers and members of the crew, and that two Italian friends of her brother told her that the officers and crew of the ship made no attempt to help in the rescue work.

Further than this, the girl charges, the passengers had to lower boats themselves, with the result that many of them were capsized with all aboard.

French Sports-Woman To Present 'Gold-Book' To Colonel Lindbergh

PARIS, Feb. 23.—(INS).—To prove that the memory of Lindbergh is still green in the hearts of many Frenchmen, Madame Germaine Gosselin, well-known sports-woman, will soon land in America to present a handsome "Gold-book" to the hero-aviator. Madame Gosselin arranged the book herself. It contains tributes and signatures of prominent French people who saw the American aviator land at Le Bourget last spring. All classes are represented, senators, representatives, artists, aviators, surgeons, business-men, actresses, boxers, etc. Madame Nungesser has written a full page and signed it in her usual manner, "From the Mar- na of Nungesser." Citroen, the "Ford" of France, has also put in a few lines. Louise Abemba, the great friend of Sarah Bernhardt, is sending a glowing tribute. Lindbergh will undoubtedly be proud to have it. Besides the Livre d'Or, Madame Gosselin is taking with her several souvenirs for Mrs. Lindbergh, among them a fine painting by Jonas, a silver tray incrustal with pearl and some handsome books.

Says Collar A Day Keeps Rag Man Away

NEW YORK, Feb. 23—(UP)—Wearing one collar for one day only will keep the rag-man away three times longer than if the owner tries to squeeze an extra day's wear out of it. This is the formula that has just been developed in a laboratory test of linens by manufacturers here.

"A fresh collar, simply laundered over without having been worn will survive thirty washings," said a Woman's Home Companion expert who participated in the experiment. "Worn one day, the same quality of collar will survive fifteen washings, but, if the wearer tries to get more service out of it, the fifth trip to the washtub will result in frayed edges."

Likewise, the expert continued, when a pillowcase or a towel is used as a dust-cloth or a shoe polisher, its life is cut short one-third. "Cleanliness, in addition to having other advantages, is true economy," the report concludes.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Croomulion, an emulsified croscote that is pleasant to take. Croomulion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, croscote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Croomulion contains, in addition to croscote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the croscote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Croomulion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial catarrh, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

WISCONSIN-PURDUE GAME CENTER OF INTEREST

MADISON TILT HAS ATTENTION OF FLOOR FANS

Contest And Its Sequel Probably to Determine Champions of Big Ten.

By GENE HOFFMAN

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO, Feb. 23.—Basketball fans the length and breadth of the Big Ten dominion will let everything else slide tonight until they hear the result of the Wisconsin-Purdue tilt at Madison.

This game—and its sequel, to be played Saturday on the boiler-makers' floor at Lafayette—are arousing more interest than anything that has happened in western conference circles since the crashing football dramas of last fall.

Purdue and Wisconsin are now tied for the conference lead. Each has won six games and lost one. Tonight will be their first meeting of the current season. It will be the acid test as to who's who in conference basketball.

Two Games to Decide

If one team is fortunate enough to win both games of the "Little World Series," that team is almost certain to finish the race in front. Unless one quintet is greatly superior to the other, the advantage of playing in home territory may divide the series and leave the two rivals just where they started.

Through Illinois and eastward, sentiment favors the boiler-makers to win both games. Purdue to date, it is believed, has faced and defeated stronger teams than have the Badgers.

Two big ten games were decided last night. Minnesota, on its own floor, upset the dope by defeating Chicago, 30 to 18. The Maroons, by virtue of their improved showing against Illinois in a recent game, were calculated to "take" the lowly and disheartened Gophers. The surprising feature was that Minnesota won by careful guarding, a department in which Chicago was excelled.

Ohio State Loses

In the other games last night, Indiana trounced Ohio State at Columbus by the overwhelming count of 52 to 17. The Buckeyes were helpless before the strong Hoosier attack. Indiana led at the half, 31 to 7.

Two other games, beside the Purdue-Wisconsin bell ringer, are scheduled for Saturday night. They

SPORTSMATTER

BY FRANK GETTY

One week from tonight, in Madison Square Garden, Jack Delaney of Bridgeport and Tom Heeneey of New Zealand are due to resume the difficult task of finding an opponent for Gene Tunney in the next battle of whatever it may be, for the heavyweight championship of the world.

The victor may be Tunney's next opponent, or may be required to meet the winner of the Sharkey-Risko fight later in March. It all depends upon how decisive the victory proves to be.

Jack Delaney, once light heavyweight champion, and once before a contender in a similar heavyweight elimination contest, has an excellent chance to win a title fight without further testing.

If the Bridgeport boxer knocks out Heeneey, and Sharkey fights another of his poor fights with Risko, Delaney automatically becomes the choice as challenger for Tunney's title.

Sharkey already has been held to a draw by Heeneey, and only the most decisive sort of victory over the Cleveland baker's boy can restore the Bostonian to the required degree of popularity.

Things look bright, therefore, for Delaney. Jack should be able to knock out the New Zealander, if he can get home with one of his deadly right upper-cuts early in the fight.

Heeneey, a rugged, willing mixer, with a stout heart and body but a sluggish brain, should be a mark for Delaney's dynamite in the opening rounds.

It may be a one-punch fight with Jack delivering the punch.

If Delaney flattens Heeneey, and I, for one, believe he will do so, he has nothing further to worry about except the manner of Sharkey's probable victory over Risko.

Of course if Sharkey decisively defeats the Cleveland boxer, the powers that be will demand that Delaney meet the Bostonian in a final elimination contest.

Delaney would have a great deal more trouble with Sharkey than with Heeneey, despite the fact that the Bostonian and the New Zealander recently battled on even terms. Heeneey is the type of fighter against whom Delaney is at his best. On the other hand, Jack never has met a big man as fast and clever as Sharkey.

From observation of Jack Delaney over a period of years, from the days when he was booed by the fans and beaten by Augie Ratner to the later days of his triumphs over Paul Berlenbach, Mike McTigue, Johnny Risko and a host of second-rate heavyweights, I believe the Bridgeport boxer has an excellent chance to defeat Heeneey and a fair chance to win the championship of the world from Tunney.

But I doubt if he can win three big fights in a row—Heeneey, Sharkey and Tunney. If Jack is required to fight Sharkey, I feel sure he will have his hands full, and if he should get past Sharkey, I believe he would be softened up and easy prey for Tunney.

Delaney, unfortunately, has been an in-and-outter. He does not keep a sustained pace of victories, but has to fight a poor fight every so often. Witness his disgraceful exhibition against Jimmy Maloney, his second fight with Johnny Risko.

To become world's champion, I believe Delaney must win by a quick knockout next Thursday night and then face Tunney. Then if the present champion is as rusty in his fighting technique as he was against Dempsey at Chicago during the first few rounds, Jack Delaney might win the title.

are, Minnesota at Ohio State and Northwestern at Michigan. Tomorrow night Illinois entertains Iowa at Champaign.

MANDELL FAVORED

CHICAGO, Feb. 23.—(INS)—Sammy Mandell, lightweight champion of the world, rules a 7-to-5 favorite to beat Jackie Fields of Los Angeles, in the ten-round feature event at the coliseum tonight. Mandell's title will not be at stake.

Fields will weigh 140 pounds, and Sammy four or five pounds lighter.

SETS SWIM RECORD

NEW HAVEN, CONN., Feb. 23.—(INS)—A new swimming record of 1 minute 34 4-5 seconds for the 150-yard back stroke event was on the books today. It was made by George Kojac, of New York, in the Yale boys' club meet here.

C. A. C. ARRANGE WRESTLING CARD

The C. A. C. plans to have their next wrestling show on Tuesday, Feb. 28. They have lined up a card which looks even better than the last one and a real evening is in store for the fans.

Carl Beightler, of Marysville, and Joe Montana, the Italian, will wrestle the main go. Montana is as rough as Beightler and that is saying a whole lot. It looks like a rough evening is in store for Beightler.

Merle Dolby, the clever boy who won the admiration of the fans last time will wrestle "Sheik" Sims in the semi-final. Sims comes here with a good reputation having wrestled for the last five years and has not yet acquired a cauliflower ear.

Two prelims will open the show and they are of the same caliber as the other two matches.

Popular prices will prevail, with ladies being admitted free and kids for a dime.

CUBS LOOK GOOD TO THEIR OWNER

CATALINA ISLAND, Cal., Feb. 22.—(INS)—"They look good to me," said owner William "Bill" Wrigley today following a visit to the Cubs training camp where he gave his 1928 pennant hopes a searching "once over." Wrigley, wrapper in a heavy sweater, sat on the bench and watched a spirited half hour of batting and fielding practice. Some of the veterans appeared stiff of joint, but the youngsters gamboled in mid-season form.

In the Middle Ages powdered human bones in red wine was prescribed for dysentery, while the marrow and oil extracts from the bones were used for rheumatism.

WOMEN TO CONTEST IN ENDURANCE RIDE

DENVER, Feb. 23.—(INS)—For the first time in seven years, the endurance side to be held next September at Broadmoor, will have two women contestants. Mrs. A. C. Thompson of Chicago, who captured many prizes in the 1928 National Western Stock Show in Denver both in the riding and driving events, will ride her own mount. Josephine Wickes, college girl of Colorado Springs, who won honors at the frontier days exhibition at Cheyenne, Wyo., last summer, also has entered.

The endurance race at Broadmoor has been held annually for the last seven years under the auspices of the United States Army Remount Service.

The ride, lasting for five days, covers a distance of sixty miles per day in the minimum time of nine hours, with a minimum load of 200 pounds on the horse, including the saddle. The first prize is a silver cup and $800.

REPORT ON SUB MISHAP MEETS WITH PROTEST

Congressmen Aroused Over Blame Attached to Dead Commander of Craft.

WASHINGTON Feb. 23.—(INS)—A storm of protest and indignation gathered on Capitol Hill today to members of congress received the inconclusive report of the naval board of inquiry on the sinking of the submarine S-4 in Provincetown Harbor two months ago.

Forty lives were lost when the damaged submersible went to the bottom with her full crew following a collision with the coast guard destroyer, Paulding on Dec. 17.

Although the formal report places technical responsibility equally upon the submarine commander and Lieutenant Commander John C. Baylis, commander of the Paulding, supplementary comments by ranking naval authorities place virtually entire blame upon Lieutenant Commander R. K. Jones, who went down with his craft.

Congressional circles express indignation at the tendency of the report to pass responsibility from the navy as a whole to the dead commander of the ill-fated craft.

Dissatisfaction on the part of the naval authorities with charges of incompetence and inefficiency on the part of Rear Admiral Frank M. Rumbly, director of rescue operations, has resulted on the return of the board's report by Secretary Wilbur with instructions to reconvene "for the purpose of setting forth with completeness the reasons upon which its opinions and recommendations were based."

DEATH RATE IN U.S. LOWEST FOR 1927 IN WHOLE HISTORY

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—(INS)—Despite an alarming increase in the number of fatalities, resulting from automobile accidents, and a decided increase in other forms of violent death, the death rate for the United States as a whole, from all causes, was lower during 1927 than for any previous year on record, according to statistics compiled by 52 leading life insurance companies.

According to these figures, the death rate among policy holders in these 52 companies was 823.5 per 100,000 for the year, a decrease from the 878.1 per 100,000 registered for 1926.

Fatal automobile accidents showed an increase of more than 9 per cent over the previous year; homicides decreased by .1 person per 100,000, but suicides increased 1.1 persons per 100,000.

In comparing the 1927 death rate with that of the previous year, the report noted the fact that the 1926 rate was itself well above the trend of recent years and, if taken by itself as a basis of comparison, would unduly emphasize the decreases of 1927. The real significance, the report stated, lay in comparison, would unduly emphasize the decreases of 1927. The average service of butter is one-third ounce, he cites. Serving inch cubes would add one-fourth ounce per portion, an increase of 35,000 pounds annually for the country, Sheridan estimates.

LEGION WILL SEE WILD WEST LIFE IN SAN ANTONIO

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Feb. 23 (INS)—With plans already well advanced, San Antonio is leaving nothing undone to make the tenth annual national convention of The American Legion, to be held here from Oct. 8 to 12, the greatest in the history of the organization.

Preparations are under way for entertaining a crowd of 100,000 or more people and for a program of fun and frolic such as has never been staged at any previous convention.

All the romance and glamor of the Southwest will be embodied in the program of entertainment features, according to Philip B. Stapp, general convention director. San Antonio plans to infuse into the program the flavor of "Wild West" frontier life, the Mexican atmosphere and the tone given by the greatest military and aviation establishment of the United States.

Rodeos, side trips to the great ranches and border towns on the Rio Grande, entertainers from Mexico City, football games, Broadway show, the greatest military demonstration and the most ambitious air circus ever staged at a Legion convention are a few of the features Stapp is lining up for the convention.

Worked Way Through

In 1661 Isaac Newton entered Trinity college, Cambridge (England), as a "sub-sizar." Fixed portions of food and drink were then called "sizers" and "subsizers" were the students who, too poor to buy their own food, carried "sizers" for others and, as a condition, obtained their own free of cost.

Origin of "Kidnaping"

The word "kidnaping" is a combination of two English colloquial words, kid, meaning a child, and the verb nab, somewhat like our word nab, a slang term for seize. It was originally used in England to designate one who carried off children to work on plantations in the American colonies.

The picture was made in France and will be presented in Paris to a special audience shortly at the Cathedral of Notre Dame. This will be the first time in the history of France that a picture has been shown in a cathedral of any other sort of ecclesiastical building.

The part of Joan of Arc is taken by Falconetti, the Italian tragedienne.

Jerusalem's New Hotel Finest in Near East; To Contain 200 Rooms

JERUSALEM, Feb. 23 — (INS) — Jerusalem's sorely needed modern hotel is at last to become a reality. The owner of the Hotel Allenby, at present the best available in Jerusalem has begun on a new hotel which when completed, promises to be one of the finest in the Near East.

"Consisting of two hundred room, Jerusalem's new hotel will be the last word in luxury and splendor," the prospectus just published cheerily announces. "Many innovations never before known in Palestine, will be introduced. Chief amongst these will be a central heating system designed especially to provide comfort to the tourists from America and Europe."

In keeping with the Oriental atmosphere of the city, the ballroom has been designed to resemble the interior of an Arabian palace of the time of Salah-ed-Din. The French cuisine is another feature.

CUTTING THE TEETH AN INDEX TO HEALTH

Delay in This Process Often Indicates the Presence of Rickets, a Condition to Be Avoided in Babies.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

A GOOD DEAL can be learned regarding the baby's growth and welfare by watching the teeth. The promptness of the cutting of the teeth is important.

The process and time of getting teeth is referred to by the doctors as the process or period of dentition. The average child is quite regular and systematic as regards the time and order of getting the teeth.

Sometimes there may be no sign of a tooth until the baby has gone several months past the usual time. This experience is called "delayed dentition." Rickets is the chief cause for delay in cutting the teeth. However, in many healthy infants no teeth appear before the tenth month. We occasionally see the first teeth at thirteen months. This is true of children who seem perfectly healthy in every other respect.

On the other hand, it is not always true that teeth appear late in children with rickets. As a rule, the cutting of the teeth and hardening of the bones of the head go on together. If one is early the other is likely to be early and vice versa. Marked irregularities in dentition are common in children.

If the infant is well nourished and thrives properly for the first six or eight months, the teeth are steadily cut after this time. This is apt to be the case, even though the child may have chronic indigestion later, or suffer from extreme undernourishment from some other cause than rickets. If the bad health dates from birth, however, dentition is almost always delayed. It seems rather remarkable that some children who are markedly emaciated as a result of chronic indigestion, may cut their teeth regularly.

There are certain foods which carry the mysterious vitamins. Without them the child will not prosper. One of these vitamins is called "vitamin D." The lack of it is associated with rickets. Then the bones

BEWARE THE
COUGH OR COLD
THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

Continued Drug Thefts Cause Great Anxiety To Scotland Yard Men

LONDON, Feb. 23 — (INS) — Perpetual thefts of dangerous drugs from doctors are causing great anxiety to police headquarters at Scotland Yard.

Cars belonging to doctors are undoubtedly being continuously shadowed by a gang, and should the doctor leave his car unattended for a moment, anything contained in it is almost certain to be stolen, just on the chance that drugs may be therein.

In addition, many doctors' houses have been mysteriously robbed recently, and anything in the shape of drugs stolen.

Since the police tightened up the system, so that the smuggling

of drugs into England from the Continent has become almost impossible, drug addicts have been ready to pay almost any price for the dope required.

Read Story of Son's Battle Death in 1919

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 23 — (UP) — After nine years of silence Mr. and Mrs. Bert Humbler of Louisville, Ky., learned the story of the heroic death of their son, Joe, by a chance reading of "One Man's War," the diary of Corporal J. E. Rendinell, edited by George Pattullo.

Corporal Rendinell served in the Sixth Marines with Humbler. Under the date of July 23, 1918, "One Man's War," tells how Humbler and Rendinell were wounded in an advance offensive attack at Belleau Woods. Later, in the base hospital, Joe Humbler died in Rendinell's arms. Except for the first telegram announcing Joe's death, the Humbler family had heard nothing about their son until they read "One Man's War," they say in a letter of gratitude to Rendinell.

A smart frock of crepe satin has an interesting blouse which flows into a scarf which runs around the back to appear again over the shoulder and hang half way down the front of the blouse. The skirt is slashed, then shirred at the side front, then left free below.

Black broadcloth is the medium of an unusual coat with distinguished lines. A cape collar of satin and wide cuffs of palm fur are the interesting notes. (The fur does not appear on the collar.) The collar and the whole coat is lined with almond green crepe de Chine.

Diagonal lines, points and flat pleating distinguish most tailored daytime and sports clothes.

Straight coats with collars and cuffs of fluffy fox are shown by many smart shops for Spring wear.

Crystals, cut to simulate fruits and flowers, are used as hat trimmings or as boutonnières.

For the last few years rumors have reached us that the natural waistline would be stressed. But until lately this rumor has never materialized. It is true that here and there a Paris frock would feature the higher waist, but the fashion never "caught" on. However, I can report to you very definitely now that a number of the smarter shops are featuring this line, and, what is more, New York is buying these frocks!

This is true of children who seem perfectly healthy in every other respect.

On the other hand, it is not always true that teeth appear late in children with rickets. As a rule, the cutting of the teeth and hardening of the bones of the head go on together. If one is early the other is likely to be early and vice versa. Marked irregularities in dentition are common in children.

If the infant is well nourished and thrives properly for the first six or eight months, the teeth are steadily cut after this time. This is apt to be the case, even though the child may have chronic indigestion later, or suffer from extreme undernourishment from some other cause than rickets. If the bad health dates from birth, however, dentition is almost always delayed. It seems rather remarkable that some children who are markedly emaciated as a result of chronic indigestion, may cut their teeth regularly.

There are certain foods which carry the mysterious vitamins. With-out them the child will not prosper. One of these vitamins is called "vitamin D." The lack of it is associated with rickets. Then the bones do not develop as they should and the teeth may not appear. Cod-liver oil is richer in vitamin D than almost any other food. This is needed in delayed dentition. Plenty of good milk, to which gelatin is added, will help. Sunlight is a great remedy, too. Exposure of the baby to the direct rays of the sun will help a lot.

Answers to Health Queries

B. C. Q.—Is it healthy to sleep on either side?

A.—Yes.

W. R. Q.—Is it possible for children to inherit defects of the eyes, such as cross eyes?

A.—Yes, sometimes.

J. D. W. Q.—Can a boy of 3, recover from tuberculosis which has just recently reached the child's left lung?

A.—Yes, if the child has careful attention and care the trouble can be arrested. Plenty of direct sunshine and fresh air, careful, nourishing diet, proper rest and sleep, combined with healthful surroundings should all bring about improvement.

M. D. Q.—One night this week I ate some dry raisins and had almost finished when I discovered they contained white worms—Is this injurious?

A.—No. Take a good cathartic.

B. A. Q.—What causes palpitation of the heart?

A.—Consult your doctor for a complete examination.

Joe. Q.—Have been operated upon for appendicitis and since have had headaches accompanied by a peculiar taste in the mouth, distress after meals, producing a languid feeling—do not vomit but have an unusual amount of saliva at times and generally feel tired.

A.—Auto-intoxication and hyper-acidity would cause most of the symptoms you describe. Watch your diet and be sure to keep the bowels active. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

MANY POPULAR PEOPLE ARE IN

Great interest is being displayed by the people of Circleville and Pickaway county in the announcement made concerning the big Salesmanship Campaign started by the Herald and Union Herald Feb. 13. All indications point to the success of the venture, and many votes are being cast daily.

The list of candidates already voted for, and which appear in the Herald and Union Herald includes many of the county's best known and popular people.

You can vote for your favorite by simply clipping the nomination blank and send them or bring them to the office. It is little effort to do, but your friends will appreciate it.

Don't hold coupons, vote them every day, the date of expiration on each coupon changes weekly, and every one must be voted before the day of expiration in order to count.

We have done our part in giving you this grand opportunity of winning a prize, now it is up to you to do your part. Any respectable man or woman residing in Pickaway county at the beginning of the campaign will be eligible to compete. Candidates may enter until the last day of the race, but the best and wisest course to follow is to clip the nomination blank from the paper fill it out with your name or that of your friend, and either send or bring it to the campaign manager at the Herald office where it will be entered with the candidates. Now don't delay this very important part of the campaign, but enter the race NOW. Now is the time, not tomorrow or next week, but NOW. Then get busy and win a prize. No one has such a start but what you can overcome if you enter NOW. Some people will tell you that you have no chance, because they have thousands and thousands of votes, such stories are told simply to discourage you and get you to drop out. Just let such BLUFFING go in one ear and OUT the other, for those who listen are the only LOSERS.

YOU CAN WIN
This campaign affords an excellent opportunity for the young ladies and gentlemen of Pickaway county to win either a car, living room suite or any of the other five valuable and costly prizes.

BEWARE THE
COUGH OR COLD
THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

Cause Great Anxiety
To Scotland Yard Men

LONDON, Feb. 23 — (INS) — Perpetual thefts of dangerous drugs from doctors are causing great anxiety to police headquarters at Scotland Yard.

Cars belonging to doctors are undoubtedly being continuously shadowed by a gang, and should the doctor leave his car unattended for a moment, anything contained in it is almost certain to be stolen, just on the chance that drugs may be therein.

In addition, many doctors' houses have been mysteriously robbed recently, and anything in the shape of drugs stolen.

Since the police tightened up the system, so that the smuggling

of drugs into England from the Continent has become almost impossible, drug addicts have been ready to pay almost any price for the dope required.

Read Story of Son's
Battle Death in 1919

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 23 — (UP) — After nine years of silence Mr. and Mrs. Bert Humbler of Louisville, Ky., learned the story of the heroic death of their son, Joe, by a chance reading of "One Man's War," the diary of Corporal J. E. Rendinell, edited by George Pattullo.

Corporal Rendinell served in the Sixth Marines with Humbler. Under the date of July 23, 1918, "One Man's War," tells how Humbler and Rendinell were wounded in an advance offensive attack at Belleau Woods. Later, in the base hospital, Joe Humbler died in Rendinell's arms. Except for the first telegram announcing Joe's death, the Humbler family had heard nothing about their son until they read "One Man's War," they say in a letter of gratitude to Rendinell.

BELFAST, Feb. 23 — (INS) — Harry O'Downey, an American seaman from Ohio, was in a critical condition in a hospital today following an attack by a group of Belfast youths. O'Downey was shot in the chest during the fight on the docks.
